Layton's legacy lives on in the land of living skies

Remembering Jack. Saskatchewanians reflect fondly on the former NDP leader's far-reaching impact

ROB BROWN

One year after his death, Jack Layton's legacy of hope and optimism is alive and well in Saskatchewan.

"He was able to find success as a leader almost everywhere in Canada," says Regina commuter Bill Pierce.

The former leader of the New Democratic Party died of cancer at the age of 61, one year ago today. His ability to cross party lines and gain respect from both supporters and rivals across the House of Commons is still recognized by Saskatchewanians today.

"He obviously was an example of a courageous politician," says Matthew Neufeld, walking in downtown Saskatoon. "He conducted an election campaign while seriously ill and he was a principled person."

"Jack was clearly a builder," said Saskatchewan New Democrat Leader John Nilson.

"He looked at the positive aspect of politics and realized people would respond."

Nilson says Layton took a special interest in the province.

"He said Saskatchewan had a crucial role in the NDP: to contribute to the building of the party.

"He was the kind of guy who could pick up and continue a conversation he was having with somebody years previous. That is a great trait for anyone."

Prior to his death, Layton led the NDP to a record 103 seats in the House, transforming the third-place party into Canada's official opposition.

Durant stays at the helm

Coach has confidence.
'I told (Darian) that he is still our quarterback and we are still going to stay with him,' Chamblin says

The Riders were back at Mosaic Stadium on Tuesday for the team's first practice since their fourth straight loss on Sunday.

After practice, head coach Corey Chamblin offered up some insights into the type of team the Riders will field against the Calgary Stampeders on Saturday.

Chamblin told media that quarterback Darian Durant still has the confidence of the Riders coaching staff and will be starting against Calgary.

"I had Darian in this morning and I told him that he is still our quarterback and we are still going to stay with him," said Chamblin. "I don't see anything that needs to be tweaked right now as far as Darian's play, a lot of (errors) might be a misread between him and the receiver."

Injury update

- At Tuesday's practice there was also news that Abraham Kromah's injury means he will not be playing against Calgary.
- "It is an ankle injury at this point. I don't know the extent of it, but he will miss this week — I know that for sure," head coach Corey Chamblin said.

"I think the thing we need to do is get our playmakers more involved and get them more touches — seven (Weston Dressler) especially," said Durant. "If you look at the games we do win (Dressler) has been heavily involved, we just need to get back to the basics."

Durant also hinted that he might be running the ball a bit more against Calgary. "I have to start using my legs a little more and my number needs to be called a bit more for running," Durant said.

Stanley Cup champ has new role behind Blades bench

Curtis Leschyshyn, the Saskatoon's Blades newest assistant coach, is a former NHL player and a Blades product of the late 1980s. DORIAN GEIGER/METRO

Former NHL player Curtis Leschyshyn will be a new face on the Saskatoon Blades' bench this Western Hockey League season.

Leschyshyn, who was named the Blades assistant coach earlier this summer, played in 1,033 NHL career games but got his start with the Blades when he laced up for Saskatoon from 1985-88. Leschyshyn also worked with the Blades on a part-time basis last season.

He's looking forward to giving back to the team that molded his professional career.

"I hold a lot of respect and admiration for the Saskatoon organization. This is truly where I got my start to making my dreams come true," he said.

Leschyshyn spent 16 seasons patrolling the blue line as a defenceman for the Quebec Nordiques, Colorado Avalanche, Washington Capitals, Hartford Whalers, Carolina Hurricanes, Minnesota Wild and Ottawa Senators.

Body parts found in waterways. 'Nice and quiet' Guang Hua Liu was a single mother of three and owned holistic spa in Toronto

Body parts found scattered in Toronto-area waterways belonged to a single mother of three, police say.

Guang Hua Liu, 41, was last seen by friends late in the afternoon on Aug. 10 as they dropped her off at her recently defunct spa in east Toronto, Peel Regional Police said at a news conference.

Friends reported her missing the next day, and on Aug. 15 her right foot was found in the Credit River in Mississauga, about 45 kilometres west of where she lived in east-end Toronto.

Liu's head and hands were later discovered in the river in the Hewick Meadows Park area.

Over the weekend, two calves, a thigh and an arm were found in West Highland Creek in east-end Toronto.

Forensic tests have determined all of those remains belonged to Liu, but police still do not know how she died.

She had three children — one is an adult and the other two live with their father, said Insp. George Koekkoek.

Police are treating the case as homicide, and while they are not yet speaking about suspects, they don't believe there are other victims.

"We're satisfied to this stage that there's no threat or danger to the public safety," Koekkoek said. "If we have information to the contrary, we'll be the first to advise."

Delaware. Daycare workers allegedly formed toddler fightclub

A child care centre in Delaware has had its business licence suspended after police arrested three employees who allegedly encouraged toddlers to fight.

The arrests were made Monday after police discovered a cellphone video of three women working at the Hands of Our Future daycare in Dover, the state capital, allegedly encouraging two three-year-olds to duke it out.

"He's pinching me," yells one child in the video.

"No pinching, only punching," is a worker's response, according to the Dover Police.

"It was a difficult video to watch," Dover Police Capt. Tim Stump told FoxNews.com. "One of the kids involved ran over to one of the adults for protection, but she turned him around back into the fight."

Tiana Harris, 21, Estefania Myers, 21 and Lisa Parker, 47, have been charged with multiple counts of assault and endangering the welfare of a child.

"It's very disturbing to think anything like that could go on," said Amy Bickerling, whose four-year-old son is enrolled at the centre, to Delawareonline.com.

"I know these teachers. I go on all the field trips. I've never seen anything irregular," she said. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Civil war. Qadri Jamil called Obama's warning over use of chemical weapons 'propagandistic threats'

President Barack Obama's warning over chemical weapons in Syria indicates the West is looking for a pretext for military intervention, a senior Syrian government official said Tuesday following talks in Moscow.

Syrian Deputy Prime Minister Qadri Jamil warned against any such intervention.

"Those who are contemplating this evidently want to see the crisis expand beyond Syria's borders," he told journalists in comments translated into Russian. The Syrian civil war, which began with a popular uprising in March 2011, is already spilling into neighbouring Lebanon.

Obama said Monday the U.S. would reconsider its opposition to military involvement in Syria if President Bashar Assad's regime deployed or used chemical or biological weapons.

Jamil described Obama's statements as "propagandistic threats" connected with the U.S. presidential election. However, he also said they indicate that "the West is looking for a pretext to intervene militarily," adding, "we must say that such intervention is impossible."

Russia, which along with China has steadfastly backed Syria and blocked UN sanctions on Assad's regime, earlier warned Syria against using chemical and biological weapons. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Negotiations

Jamil said the government would be willing to discuss Assad's resignation but only after the opposition agreed to join in negotiating a peaceful settlement.

- "Making his resignation a condition for dialogue effectively makes holding such a dialogue impossible," Jamil said. "During the negotiating process any issues can be discussed, and we are ready to discuss even this issue."

Thwarted. Woman calls off 4th attempt to swim from Cuba to Florida

Diana Nyad ended her fourth attempt in nearly 35 years to swim across the Straits of Florida on Tuesday, her dream of setting a record thwarted by storms, jellyfish stings, shark threats, hypothermia and swollen lips.

Canadian nickel firm snagged in corruption case

Mining. Government officials and workers from joint Cuban-Canadian venture convicted in contract-expansion probe

A Cuban court has convicted a dozen people of corruption, including high-ranking government officials, an executive at a state-run nickel company and workers from a project operating under a Cuban-Canadian joint concern, official media announced Tuesday.

In a case involving a contract for the expansion of the Pedro Soto Alba nickel and cobalt processing plant at the Moa mine, the sentences range from four to 12 years, the Communist Party newspaper Granma reported.

The announcement was the first official confirmation of a probe that since last year has been the source of rumour on the island, part of a crackdown on graft that has caught up several foreigners and sent a chill through the small foreign business community.

The Moa Joint Venture that controls the mining operation is operated in tandem by Cuba and Toronto-based mining company Sherritt International Corp.

Moa currently produces 37,000 tons of nickel and cobalt per year, according to Sherritt's website.

In April, a senior government official said the mineral accounted for 30 per cent of exports in 2011, which would put nickel revenues at $1.8 billion for the year based on recently released overall export figures. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TWO TINY, BEAUTIFUL BOOKS

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca/voices/just-saying

Every once in a while, something wonderful this way comes.

In my case, that would be Cheryl Strayed, author of Wild, the New York Times bestseller that prompted Oprah to relaunch her book club.

Wild is a tour de force, a searing, soaring account of the author's 1,100-mile trek across the Pacific Crest Trail back in the '90s, when she was recovering from the death of her mother, a broken marriage and, oh, a heroin addiction.

If you have time left to add one to your summer reading list, I'd recommend Wild.

If Wild was the only reason to celebrate Cheryl Strayed's gifts as a writer, that would be enough. But there's more. She is also the heart, mind and soul behind Dear Sugar, the greatest advice column ever. Dear Sugar is a regular feature of therumpus.net, an online culture magazine. Strayed revealed that she was the writer behind Dear Sugar in February, and in July, Tiny Beautiful Things, a collection of her best advice, was published.

So far, it has spent its entire published existence on the New York Times bestseller list.

I'm recommending that you read Wild but I'm pleading with you to read Tiny Beautiful Things. It should be required reading for every struggling soul on the planet, and as far as I know, that's all of us.

Here's a sample. It's in response to an advice-seeker who is jealous of the success of fellow authors, especially those who score six-figure deals with their publishers. I can relate to that. Cheryl's diagnosis: "Could it be possible that the reason you feel like you swallowed a spoonful of battery acid every time someone gets what you want is because a long time ago — way back in your own very beginnings — you were sold a bill of goods about the relationship between money and success, fame and authenticity, legitimacy and adulation?"

Oh.

And here's her antidote: "But the people who don't give up … they've taken into their hearts the idea that there is enough for all of us, that success will manifest itself in different ways for different sorts of artists, that keeping the faith is more important than cashing the cheque, that being genuinely happy for someone else who got something you hope to get makes you genuinely happier too."

Wish I'd said that, especially the part about keeping the faith is more important than cashing the cheque.

But I'm not jealous, because Cheryl gives way more than she gets. And despite her (almost) overnight fame, she still turns up at readings for free and tutors aspiring writers, although, now that Reese Witherspoon has optioned Wild for some fabulous amount, it will be interesting to see if she can keep her feet on the ground.

Of course, she's pre-grounded. Trekking 1,100 miles through the Sierra Mountains lugging a 60-pound pack and wearing shoes that are too tight will do that to you.

Hollywood's unlikely go-to guy

Joseph Gordon-Levitt. This rising star has yet to settle into an easily defined persona

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

In Hollywood careers are built on images. While actors complain about being pigeon-holed, for many being synonymous with a genre has been the cornerstone of their careers.

Then there's Joseph Gordon-Levitt. He's quickly becoming one of Hollywood's go-to guys even though he has yet to settle into an easily defined persona.

He's been acting since age four, but the first time most of us saw him he was playing an ancient alien trapped in an adolescent's body on the sitcom Third Rock from the Sun. He left the show after six years and for a time made the kind of films you would expect a young sitcom star to make: 10 Things I Hate About You and the animated Treasure Planet.

Then things got interesting.

After a short break from the screen to study at Columbia University he vowed to "only make good films." What followed is an eclectic IMDB listing that includes everything from low-budget movies like Manic, to indie comedy 500 Days of Summer, to his blockbuster work with Christopher Nolan in Inception and The Dark Knight Rises.

In Mysterious Skin he wore blue contact lenses to play a child-abuse victim turned hustler. Roger Ebert wrote, "This is not an easy movie." And the Guardian called it a "disorienting hallucination of a film." Both praised his performance.

The Lookout sees him playing a man with a head injury: "The hardest thing I've ever done in my life," he said. While in Killshot, he's a wannabe assassin opposite Mickey Rourke.

It's these off-the-wall choices, mixed with more mainstream fare, that prompted the Philadelphia Inquirer to describe Gordon-Levitt as a "surprisingly formidable, and formidably surprising, leading man."

American Idol targeting new judges

Time is running out for American Idol to fill up the judges' table for its 12th season, and producers are reportedly circling a couple of options for new talent. According to the Associated Press, "a deal is in the works" for singer Nicki Minaj to come on-board, joining Mariah Carey, who was added to the lineup last month. And a source tells People magazine that Enrique Iglesias is also in talks to join the reality singing competition. "Idol has expressed a lot of interest, but no final word on either side yet," the source says.

Rumours of Tony Scott illness not true: Family

It appears there's no truth to the reports that director Tony Scott had been diagnosed with inoperable brain cancer before he decided to jump to his death from a bridge over Los Angeles Harbor Sunday. "According to family spokespersons, the information concerning brain cancer or an inoperable brain tumor in Mr. Scott is incorrect," a spokesman for the L.A. coroner's office tells People magazine. The initial report of a cancer diagnosis came from ABC News, citing an anonymous source.

Ryan Lochte to hand out roses?

THE WORD
Monica Weymouth
scene@metronews.ca

With four years until he's due in Rio, Olympic swimmer Ryan Lochte is scoping out a side job in reality TV.

At the top of the list is The Bachelor, whose producers have been informed that they'll need to come up with at least $750,000 for such high-quality abs.

But even if they pay, Lochte may pass.

"Ryan is acutely aware that he has to attach himself to the right projects and endorsements that won't do damage to his all-American image," a source tells RadarOnline.

"As much as he'd like to do it, Ryan does have some reservations about The Bachelor because he wouldn't have any control on how he is portrayed on the show."

Ryan, at this point there's nothing more American than compromising your reputation, marriage and career in the name of fleeting fame. Consider this our blessing.

5 travel personalities

Planning a vacation is exciting, and made even more thrilling when you're going with someone special. Except it doesn't always work out perfectly. When it comes to packing and jumping on a plane, everyone has their own travel personality. Here's how to handle some of them.

MAE GIFFORD
life@metronews.ca

1 The over planner

You're in Paris and they're intent on touring the Louvre, Arc de Triomphe and Eiffel Tower by noon on the first day. Keep up at this panicked rate and you're bound to see the entire City of Lights in record time, but won't remember any of it. Suggest one afternoon of people watching in a public square over a carafe of French wine. Their shoulders will drop in no time.

2 The obvious tourist

Money belt? Check. Canadian flag in plain sight so no one confuses you with an American? Check. Comfortable New Balance walking shoes and socks that reach mid-calf? Check. Canadian tourists stick out like sore thumbs and it's not just embarrassing, it can also put you at risk for pickpocketing or schemers. The simple rule is to dress on vacation like you normally would. But if your wardrobe includes any of the above items, you can't be helped.

3 The person who hates travelling

They haven't travelled in years but somehow you convinced them to come on your dream cruise. Big mistake. They hate sleeping in a strange bed, new scenery, food, water and boats. Instead of throwing them overboard, try to compromise on activities you'll both enjoy. Joining them in the casino for a few hours (gag!) may translate into you getting the most out of your trip with fewer complaints.

4 The embarrassing keener

Armed with their Lonely Planet guidebook, which they studied for months, this friend will regurgitate every iota of information they know at each attraction you visit. Even better, they're hell-bent on speaking the language, which typically includes them shout-sputtering random words at locals. Nip this annoying behaviour in the bud by suggesting they'll get much more out of the experience if they don't have their nose stuck in a book the entire time. If all else fails, accidentally "lose" it.

5 The under planner

They had no opinion on which country to see and now that you've landed, they're just along for the ride. Instead of getting frustrated at their lackadaisical attitude toward travel, embrace it! This is your opportunity to design the trip you've always wanted without any complaining. This type of personality can be convinced to do anything, so be as busy or relaxed as you like. The best part is that they're going to love the trip because they had no expectations.

Tiger shrimp, pesto and grilled corn: An unlikely — but tasty — salad trio

for more, visit
rosereisman.com

Tiger shrimp are quite affordable today compared to what they cost a few years ago. If you can't find them, you can use smaller shrimp. Using a spinach pesto is a good example of how you can use different ingredients to make variations on classic basil pesto. If you don't have fresh corn, sauté 2 cups canned or frozen corn until lightly charred.

1. Salad: Lightly coat cobs of corn with cooking spray and grill on barbecue 5 minutes or until charred, turning to avoid burning. Alternatively, bake corn in an oven preheated to 450 F for 5 minutes, also turning to prevent burning. Let corn cool slightly and cut kernels off cob with sharp knife. Place in a bowl along with red pepper, red onion, garlic, jalapeño, cider vinegar, olive oil, honey (if using), fresh basil, salt and pepper. Toss to combine.

Ingredients

- 1 lb large shrimp, peeled and deveined
- 1/4 cup store-bought pesto

Salad

- 3 fresh cobs of corn
- 1/2 cup diced roasted red pepper (about 1 small roasted red pepper)
- 1/2 cup diced red onion
- 1 tsp chopped garlic
- 1 1/2 tsp chopped jalapeño pepper
- 1 tbsp apple cider vinegar
- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 1/2 tsp honey (optional)
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh basil
- pinch of salt and pepper

2. Lightly coat a nonstick skillet or grill pan with cooking spray and set over medium high heat. Add shrimp and sauté until just pink, about 3 minutes.

3. Place the corn salad on a serving plate, top with shrimp and garnish with pesto.

Coconut-Lemonade Slushies

Slushies are one of the tastiest ways to cool down during the summer. Here, the classic taste of lemonade meets the refreshing flavour of coconut.

- 3 cups lightly crushed ice
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1/2 cup sweetened cream of coconut
- 1/4 cup agave syrup or honey
- 1 tsp vanilla extract
- Pinch salt

Combine all ingredients in a blender. Purée until smooth. You may need to stop the blender once or twice and stir the ingredients in order to keep them moving in the blender. Serve immediately.

Nab some bucks between the books

Post-secondary profession. With these strategies, some gumption and a solid resumé, you can get started on your on-campus job search

CATHY KEATES
TalentEgg.ca

Most campuses have lots of student jobs available, but it isn't always easy figuring out how to find them.

While some jobs for the coming school year will have already been filled (some departments do their hiring in winter/spring of the previous year so that they are ready to go with new staff in September) there are usually still lots of jobs open in the fall.

In terms of where to look, most schools do not have one place where all the jobs are advertised.

So, it can take some legwork to look around to find what's available on your campus. And just like finding jobs anywhere, networking is key.

Here are some tips for helping you get job hunting on campus.

It's hard to believe, but not every opportunity can be found on the net. Look around and ask around you. ISTOCK

Visit your campus career centre

The career centre should be stop number one if you are looking for work on campus. Staff at the career centre are usually very knowledgeable about on campus work, and getting their advice first can save you lots of time with their leads and direction.

Find out about work/study programs

Many schools have part-time jobs on campus that are specifically designated for students who are in financial need. These are often called work/study programs, but may have a different name at your campus. To learn more, and to find out whether you qualify ('financial need' can be defined differently at different schools), ask staff at your career centre and/or student financial services or loan office.

Speak with professors and your department

Often professors need help with their work. Sometimes they have enough money to hire students (other times they may use volunteers). Check with your departmental staff and faculty members if you are interested in getting research-related experience.

Visit on-campus vendors

The restaurants, pubs, shops, and other retail outlets on campus all need staff. You can visit them and see if they are hiring.

Keep your eyes and ears open

Watch notice boards, let all your friends know you are looking and ask them if they have any contacts or leads, make sure you read the emails you might get from your department or student clubs — you never know what might turn up a job lead.

The more people you speak with, the greater your chances of finding something.

Injury bug nipping at Vick's heels

Michael Vick has required four medical tests and completed four passes in the Philadelphia Eagles' first two pre-season games.

That is an ominous sign for the Philadelphia Eagles.

X-rays on Vick's ribs at the stadium were negative, and an MRI and CT scan on Tuesday revealed he has no broken bones or fractured cartilage.

Jays' Lawrie back on shelf with abdominal pain

Toronto third baseman Brett Lawrie has stopped his rehab for a right oblique injury after feeling sore when he woke up on Tuesday.

Manager John Farrell said Lawrie, who has been on the disabled list since Aug. 4, isn't yet at a point where he might need to be shut down for the season.

Before Tuesday's 5-3 loss in Detroit, Farrell also said right-hander Brandon Morrow, who hasn't pitched since June 11 because of a left oblique injury, likely will start Saturday at Baltimore. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Still looking for a 'jumping off point'

NHL. League, players' union to focus on core economic issues during this week's labour talks

Critical week

Talks are tentatively scheduled for the next two weeks in New York so there is plenty of room for continued dialogue if the parties can start getting on the same page in the coming days.

- The tone of this week's talks should offer a good indication of whether that will happen in time for a deal to be reached before Sept. 15.

Where do we go from here?

As the NHL and NHL Players' Association resume collective bargaining talks, that is the question they're both seeking to answer.

The sides stepped away from negotiations last week with competing bids on the table and no clear road ahead. They spoke again over the weekend and agreed to devote sessions Wednesday and Thursday entirely to core economic issues — the area where the parties seem to have the most ground to make up.

"We are hoping that our meetings this week can serve as a jumping off point for further discussion and negotiation over the critical economic and system issues that we need to resolve in order to reach an agreement," NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly said Tuesday in an email.

Essentially, it's time to see how much each side is willing to move off its current position, if at all.

While a significant gap exists between the two proposals when it comes to the amount of money available to players, there is some common ground. The union's decision to keep a hard salary cap in place was an important step and its willingness to accept less than 57 per cent of revenues — for three years, anyway — seemed to indicate it was trying to work with the NHL.

"We thought it was a compromise," Donald Fehr, the NHLPA's executive director, told reporters last week.

Even though commissioner Gary Bettman offered a cold response to the union's offer it was a step in the right direction. Are the players willing to go even further? How far will the league move off its proposal, which called for new contract restrictions and player salaries based on 43 per cent of revenue?

The sides are operating in the shadow of a Sept. 15 deadline, when the current CBA is set to expire and the NHL has said players will be locked out.

Baseball. Clemens return stint already drawing interest from Astros

Roger Clemens thinks any talk about a return to the majors is premature.

The Houston Astros decided to check him out anyway.

General manager Jeff Luhnow said Tuesday the Astros sent a scout to look at Clemens and left-hander Scott Kazmir, who also plays for the Sugar Land Skeeters of the independent Atlantic League. Clemens is to make his first start on Saturday at home against Bridgeport.

Luhnow said he wasn't sure whether Clemens was trying to make it back to the big leagues or just wanted to keep doing something he was very good at for a long time. Clemens earned about $160 million and won 354 games in a 24-year career with the Red Sox, Blue Jays, Yankees and Astros, but hasn't pitched since 2007.

Check used Nitro for transmission issues

Second Gear.
2007 to 2011
Dodge Nitro

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
drive@metronews.ca

Nitro brought Dodge's presence to the utility vehicle scene occupied by models like the Nissan Rogue and Hyundai Santa Fe.

Driver-selectable four-wheel drive, plenty of ground clearance and a solid rear axle made this a family-ready ute that could handle towing and off-road use with ease.

Trim levels started with SE for a 'basic' Nitro, with SXT, SLT and R/T filling the model range from less to more loaded.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Common Issues

Be sure to "feel" for any signs of transmission slippage or a "shudder" at lower speeds and under light loads — which could indicate a problem with the transmission or torque converter, or the computer that controls them. If the transmission exhibits any of these symptoms, be sure to have it checked. Some owners have reported transmission or torque converter replacement under warranty.

Have a mechanic inspect your candidate for signs of oil leakage — particularly around the rear of the oil pan, and at the rear differential. Be sure any leaks are remedied ahead of your purchase.

Engine

Power came from a 3.7-litre, 210-horsepower V6, or a 4-litre V6 with up to 260 horsepower. Manual and automatic transmissions were available.

What Owners Like

Nitro owners rate ride, handling, flexibility, confidence, and all-season traction highly. The upgraded stereo is well liked, as is the styling and overall "bang for the buck" where feature content is concerned.

What Owners Dislike

Common complaints include limited footwell space, limited headroom for taller drivers, and a long reach for the gear shifter.

Verdict

Styling, driving dynamics and a high degree of capability and utility are the largest draws to the Nitro as a used buy. Seek the advice and approval of a trained Dodge mechanic ahead of your purchase.

AVIC puts smartphone functionality in your dashboard

Product review.
Pioneer AVIC Z140BH

The smartphone is today's go-to device for one-touch access to multimedia, contacts, information, entertainment and directions. Incidentally, they're illegal to use while you drive — despite how rapidly advanced connectivity is becoming a part of the modern motoring experience.

Automakers have responded with ever-improving "infotainment" systems in their latest models that seek to provide easy access to many connectivity features — though Pioneer has been proving for years that one needn't buy a new ride to benefit from them.

Pioneer's line of AVIC 'all- in-one' head-units offer top-line functionality for drivers using almost any ride as a personal listening space, a mobile office, or anything in between. The new AVIC Z140BH is hitting shelves now — and your writer recently took one for a test-drive.

It was an intimidating proposition, at first. The AVIC is the market's leading high-tech, in-car entertainment and communications hub, and I have a level of tech-savviness that would make Mark Saltzman nauseous.

But the AVIC is designed to mimic the functionality of a smartphone, like my Android-based Motorola Razr. There are numerous similarities.

Like my phone, the AVIC uses a few "fixed" buttons to reduce distraction and ease navigation, in conjunction with a colourful sliding, animated, touch-activated interface. Just like on your favourite smartphone, directions, contacts, music and other information is always a tap or swipe away. You can even drag and drop custom shortcut items onto your AVIC's home menu for easy access.

The AVIC sweeps smoothly between navigation, radio tuner, Bluetooth playback and other functions — thanks partly to a built-in graphics accelerator. Pairing the Z140BH with my Motorola Razr handset via Bluetooth was easy, and aside from a handful of split-second lags, the entire thing ran liquid smooth.

Oh, and the giant touch-screen folds out of the way to accept a CD, if you're still listening to those. The tested AVIC unit looked great both in action and while turned off — thanks to a professional install.

Mike Kalicki recently had the unit fitted to his Ford F-350 using Future Shop's Connect Pro service.

"They're easy to work with," he mentions. "I just set up an appointment, told them what kind of truck I have, and they had everything ready when I got there."

Contact your favourite electronics retailer or installer to make sure the AVIC will fit in your ride.

Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

You can never start not listening to your father too early. Amelia Goetz, around 1 1/2 years old, behind the wheel of her father's Jaguar and not looking at all where she's driving. CONTRIBUTED Sixteen candles light up Amelia's birthday cake. They also produce an invisible cloud of angst, which settles nicely in her father's psyche.

Looming directly ahead: The Year Amelia Learns to Drive.

The father is an automotive journalist, and more than familiar with the statistics, which show teenage drivers are particularly good at crashing.

Young people like to travel in packs. Net result: A motor vehicle accident is the leading cause of death for people 15-24 years of age (Statistics Canada). That group had 2,247 total deaths in 2007 — 703 were due to motor vehicle accidents.

His line of business has also made him ruminate quite a bit on how one should go about driving a motor vehicle. Family members have even mentioned, on several occasions, that he might ruminate about such matters a bit too much. So he wonders if he might be too harsh a critic for a burgeoning driver, and for one he is already holding his breath for…

He also understands that maybe he knows the student too well. He cannot forget, for instance, all the absent-minded manoeuvres and poor decision-making she displayed when she was four.

The father also remembers how he was taught to drive by his own father — a generally successful endeavour, punctuated by a memorable blow-up that made suppers awkward for several weeks later, until respective tempers cooled down. The student at the time always thought that a professional instructor would not have gotten quite that angry at him for "almost" driving into a big fence post. (Though time has seen that student sympathize a bit more with his old man, and that man's feelings for his prized, brand-new 1973 Plymouth Fury II.)

All this made the current father wonder if he was the right man for the job.

It was always the family's plan to get Amelia into a professional driving course at some point. What harm would it do, for the father to first teach her some basics?

So when Amelia recently obtained her beginner's licence (known as G1 in Ontario), and requested a first lesson from her father, the father said "OK."

While Amelia meandered around the Loblaws' parking lot somewhat inconsistently, the father forced himself to be especially calm, encouraging, and instructive. He took solace in the fact that this particular student always came through in the end, always took responsibility, and could already do many clever things. He took pains not to instruct too much. He thought things went well.

Funny then, that Amelia remembers it differently. She remembers her father being too tense and nervous, too wordy, and too critical. It was an environment, she says, not at all conducive to learning a difficult task.

Driver training is best left to the professionals — they know their stuff, and they're not the parents.

Century-old technology helps current hybrids

Atkinson cycles decrease power in engines, but increase fuel efficiency

JIL MCINTOSH
drive@metronews.ca

Atkinson cycle facts

- Every new Toyota and Lexus hybrid uses the Atkinson cycle, to increase its fuel efficiency.
- Older Atkinson cycle engines used mechanical methods to adjust the stroke, but modern engines use electronics to adjust the valve timing.

The Toyota Prius C uses the Atkinson cycle. JIL MCINTOSH/FOR METRO

It's been said that "everything old is new again." That's definitely the case with the Atkinson cycle engine, which is used on several hybrid vehicles, including the Toyota Prius. This modern technology is based on a system devised by James Atkinson back in the 1880s.

"You're drawing more energy out of the gasoline," says John-Paul Farag, manager of advanced technology and powertrain at Toyota Canada. "There's no extra maintenance, and it doesn't feel any different, but it's a different way of timing the valves to squeeze more power out of the fuel."

Engines contain pistons, which move up and down to turn a large central crankshaft that eventually powers the wheels, much the same way that your legs go up and down to pedal a bicycle. The pistons are powered by gasoline, and the length of their movement is called the stroke. Each piston makes four strokes per cycle: drawing in gasoline vapour, compressing it, providing the power, and then pushing out the exhaust.

By adjusting the opening and closing of the valves that let in the gasoline, engineers can adjust the length of each stroke. In an Atkinson cycle, the piston strokes are manipulated to be as fuel-efficient as possible. This means the engine isn't as powerful, which is why the Atkinson cycle isn't used in regular vehicles.

"What we're trying to achieve is a much more efficient cycle, but the drawback is at the expense of power," Farag says. "It's ideal for hybrids, because they have electric motors to compensate."

When more power is needed, such as for acceleration — power that a regular Atkinson cycle engine wouldn't be able to provide on its own — the hybrid's electric motor runs in conjunction with the gasoline engine to give the driver what's needed. While hybrids traditionally get their best mileage in the city, the Atkinson cycle also allows them to achieve excellent fuel economy on the highway, since the electric motor and gasoline engine work together.
